

Transferring From The Other Universities To The Yemen Universities

Universities all over the globe have some kind of provisions for the students that are transferring from the other colleges, universities and from the other countries for various reasons. The same applies to Al-Nasser University in Yemen. Al-Nasser University has tie-ups and agreements with other colleges and universities, which allows students from those universities to move to Al-Nasser without losing their course credits and time.

Before transferring from the other institutions you should first make sure to check whether you will be able to transfer your course credits to Al-Nasser University and whether your current institution has an agreement with Al-Nasser, the best practical university in Yemen. Many students prefer to move to Al-Nasser because of the quality of the education that they get from this university and for the practical approach used by this university.

If you have done comparable academic courses from a partner university either within Yemen or with another international university that has partnership with the Al-Nasser University, then you need not have to worry about the transfer, everything will be very smoothly handled by the Al-Nasser University Yemen. However, transferring students are handled on case by case basis depending on the agreement level, nature of the courses completed, nature of the courses in which the student enrolls and so on.

If you are a Yemeni student, that has completed his or her studies outside Yemen, you will have to provide the required documentation to establish your previous education and the courses completed while transferring. It is also possible to transfer credits from other colleges or universities that have no agreement with Al-Nasser. This however will be decided by the respective departments.

From the above, it is evident that transferring from one university to another university or from one college to another college from a different country is very much possible. However, you need to go through the right transfer process. It is important that you get all the required information directly from the institution to which you would like to transfer.

You can avoid all these hassles by carefully selecting your universities right at the beginning. You may not be able to avoid such transfers in certain circumstances but for others, you better spend adequate time to review multiple colleges and universities. When you find a dependable university like Al-Nasser University, you will not be required to worry about any transfers because students actually move from other institutions to Al-Nasser because of the reputation of this institution and because of the nature of the courses offered.
